BACKDOWN' HIT Truckers Back on Job; BY B.C. FED

The B.C. Federation of Labor criticized Teamsters' Union president Senator Ed Lawson for backing away from a confrontation with the provincial government over the trucking industry

"Having avoided tarnishing his own law-abiding image, Senator Lawson's willingness to avoid having his members stick their necks out in the future by defying the law will certainly not be taken seriously by the employers," a federation press release said.

'The statement deplored the decision Sunday by members of three Teamster locals to return to work as "capitulation to the dictatorial and anti-democratic actions" of the provincial government.

Tankers—What Can Canada Do? Nothing!

VANCOUVER (GP) - Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said here it would be difficult for Canada to do anything that would lead to halting United States plans to ship Alaskan oil in super-tankers down the west coast of British Columbia.

This appears to be totally beyond our reach as a nation," Mr. Davis told a Liberal party seminar in West Vancouver.

He said that if the U.S. decides to move crude oil by an 810-mile pipeline south from the North Slope to the Pacific port of Valdez and then ship it by tanker to a refinery just south of the Canadian border at Ferndale, Wash., only international waters and U.S. territory and waters would be involved.

Canada is opposed to the proposal, now under study by the U.S. governments, to ship the oil by tanker. Ottawa has expressed fears that accidental spills could seriously endanger Canadian waters.

"I just don't have the easy answer," Mr. Davis said. "We have been in close contact with Washington. But we don't seem to have been able to bring much influence to bear

Union Vows Fight At Ballot Box

The general trucking industry in British Columbia rolled back into full gear this morning after Teanister Union members voted Sunday to obey a cabinet back-to-work order.

This ended the 40-day work stoppage which involved both strikes and lockouts and affected up to 3,400 union members and 70 companies

But while Teamsters were back at work, they approved resolutions to: Shut down any employer who requires union members to handle struck goods;

 Defeat those members of the legislature who voted in favor of a back-to-work resolution last Wednesday,

Ed Zimmerman, secretary of Teamsters Local 31, said the union will "fight to the Supreme Court of Canada" any employer who asks a union member to drive equipment carrying struck goods or takes disciplinary action against a union member for refusing to do this member for refusing to do this.

Another part of the resolution approved at a meeting of 1,800 union members in Vancouver said "that we remember those individuals who imposed this legislation and defeat them at the ballot box."

Zimmerman said this is a move away from the traditional non-partisanship of the Teamsters Union in political action, but added that "we do not endorse any political party.

The back-to-work resolution was supported by 33 Social Credit MLAs and four Liberals. It was opposed by 12 New Democrats and one Liberal.

Zimmerman said union members will be told who voted each way "and I imagine it will be by name and party."

The cabinet order, which has no time limit, ending the work stoppage also referred the dispute to the mediation commission for a compulsory settlement. Both sides, however, can reach their own agreement but there was no word today of negotiations

Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the Teamsters Union, explained after Sunday's mem-bership meeting that 'the recommendation ap-proved by members was reached after discussions with the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Separatists Resist Radicals

Times News Service

QUEBEC - Rene Levesque is still leader of the separatist Pari Quebecois but his control over the PQ may no has seemed in the past.

Mr. Levesque and the moderate wing of the PQ won several rounds against the separatist party's radicals at the PQ's third annual convention, which ended Sunday, but the radical wing still managed to score some points.

The moderates re-elected Mr. Levesque as leader for a fourth straight one-year term and defeated two resolutions proposed by the radicals.

The radicals showed they represent a strong minority within the party and raised Pierre Bourgault, a member of the militant wing and a long-time source of embarrassment to moderate separa-tists, to a new position of influence as a member of the development proposal for Wharf Street is again demanding public attention, and last week's public panel sponsored by the Capital Region Branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada was an appropriate contribution to the debate. It is important that full opportunity be provided for discussion because the eventual decision on this three-tower high-rise plan will no doubt establish the pattern for further development along the waterfront and throughout the downtown area.

The decision is between two concepts. Should Victoria strive to develop its buildings, streets and general environment along lines compatible with its natural location, its green-garden tradition, and its general open-view appearance; or should it go all-out for the style of much city-building today, with highrise concentration, an inward-looking attitude, and, a general conformity with rising cities which do not have the type of location which is Victoria's main charm?

Obviously, this is a crucial decision which demands wide discussion by all segments v of the people. It will not be helped by a descent to personalities, or by accusations such as Mr. Reid's reported one to the effect that people who do not favor his highrise proposal do not love their city.

It should be understood, of

THE CONTROVERSIAL REID course, that a city cannot become all parkland and public promenades: the basis of its existence must be economic. The real controversy then, is not between maintaining the commercial function or bringing a rural atmosphere to town, but between the two forms which the commercial function can assume. Will the offices, apartments, shops, warehouses and other buildings of the cityscape be of a nature in keeping with the history and image of this seaside residential and resort community, or will it copy the current architectural style of cities in which vertical development did not have to be at the expense of natural features or was, perhaps, the only possible means of expansion?

The history and appearance of Canadian cities today are replete with examples of sorry building errors and worse planning. Need we, to conform with an imported and currently fashionable architectural style, use it indiscriminately and without regard for existing assets? Must high-rises, excellent when properly sited, so frequently be at the edge of sea or lake or park, to the detriment of everything behind ing them for people rather than cars, remain as acute as ever. The reason is that the Board's decision was a split opinion and the two members who favored going ahead with the Spadina had all the poor reasons while the man who wanted it reconsidered had all the ones. As sometimes happens in legal judgments, it will be the dissenting opinion that will be remembered and quoted, long after the Spadina is built.

Spadina is a multi-lane, limited-access rapid transit trains connecting the north west suburbs to the city core. It does not replace, for the most part, any existing roads or transportation corridors. It is a new slash through some five miles of

Off-Again-On-Again

Construction was begun, after 30 years of on-off planning, in 1963 and some $65,500,000 spent on land expropria-tion, a mile or so of finished highway in unfinished open cut, and the design of of the ravine tunnels. By September of 1969, a combination of spiralling costs, design changes and mounting citizen opposition prompted Metropolitan onto to call a halt for further studies and public hearings. In the event, the municipality decided to go ahead and applied to the O.M.B. for approval of

The greater good, Mr. McGuire said, was that the expressway would get people and goods from the suburbs to the owntown core and vice versa, thereby increasing Toronto's attractiveness as a place for more economic growth. metropolitan community is a place for rning a livelihood," he declared, "The existence of any urban area at a particular place and its growth or decline depend on the expansion or contraction opportunities for employment and in-estment." The fears of what the Spadina would do to inner city neigh-borhoods were overstated and, besides, takes a lot to destroy a community

Chairman J. A. Kennedy was the O.M.B. member who originally approved the Spadina project in one day back in Now 68 and given to occasional crustiness, he will retire next year after a long and distinguished career as a kind of citizen's ombudsman. But he is not so old that he can't change his mind.

There is strong evidence that to intrude this expressway into the developed residential areas," he wrote, "will harm these areas by uprooting the homes of residents who want to remain where they are, by increasing pressures for high density development on good quality areas of low density residential development, and by destroying a very considerable amount of the natural beauty in ravines.

It would be "a pity

True, it would all have to bow to the great public interest if the Spadina project could be justified. But at the very least further study was necessary: transportation routes could not be decided apart from land use development densities, yet an official plan settling these aspects has never been adopted by Metropolitan Toronto; no study of the comparative cost of expressways and public transit had been made; measures to increase transit use by_limiting automobile access to the downtown core had not been examined; Toronto Transit Commission admitted it was following the Spadina alignment in order to save money rather than taking a hard look to see where rapid transit should go in order to draw maximum patronage.

Above all, Mr. Kennedy noted, the Board's hearings had revealed that a traffic study submitted to the Metropolitan Planning Director almost a year ago showed that even if the Spadina and other expressways are built, the average would be 12 miles an hour in 1995 against 17 miles an hour in 1964, and the average trip would take 56 minutes compared this report has yet to be submitted to Metropolitan Planning Board or the municipal council; the Planning Director (who favored Spadina) is still "studying"

Slowing Traffic

'It must be obvious that when expert ophecy is that design capacity will be overtaxed to the point of doubling trip time and reducing speed to 12 miles an Mr. Kennedy said, "then the question of expressway or public transit becomes a serious one indeed.

"Add to this the scarcity of the capital dollar to provide these facilities, which is admitted or proven on all sides by everyone from municipal financier to taxpayer, and you have an urgent situation amounting really to a civic crisis. The situation simply cries out for an agonizing reappraisal.'

Expressway planning, Mr. Kennedy said, appeared to be based on the acceptance of personal preference for the private automobile as against public wish to drive to work in their own car. 3 mills. Although I no longer have any direct responsibility in connection with these matters I have, naturally, kept in close touch with developments in this co cated and very important subject. Perps your readers will be interested in a brief summary of the actual situation. Under the terms of the Treaty the United States paid to Canada and Ottawa transferred to Victoria:

1-For downstream power benefits: $273.3 millions

2-For downstream flood control benefits: $68.3 millions

In addition British Columbia' has received:

3-Interest on 1 and 2: $92.2 millions 4—Extra payments for early comple-tion of Duncan Dam: $4.3 millions

5-Extra payments for early comple-tion of Keenleyside (Arrow) Dam: $4.4 millions 6-Extra payment for increased and project: $193.5 millions

3—Cost to date of the Mica project:

$203.5 millions

4 Cost to date under "General" heading: $2.7 millions Total cost to date $431.5 millions

It is important to observe that of the total expenditure some $60 millions has been used to improve the environment of the Kootenay-Columbia region in excess of the replacement of "like with like." What part of this should properly be charged to the Treaty projects and what part should be met by Provincial funds is still, I understand, not decided. Nor am I making any allowance for the many millions of dollars being spent in connection with Mica which will mean a saving of that amount when Revelstoke Canyon and Downie Creek are built.

Assuming that all of this area improvement is charged to the Treaty projects (which in my opinion would be quite unfair) the amount still available to apply to Mica construction would be The hest available estimate of comple tion costs of Mica Dam is $125 millions.

Shortly before he died R. C. The original (1964) estimate was that the Treaty funds and income therefrom would pay for all three dams and about half the cost of machining Mica. But it was repeatedly and specifically stated that this estimate was based on the concept of replacement of "like with like" and did not provide for infiftion. inflation after 1964 the original estimates would have been fully justified and we could still anticipate power from Mica for about 1.5 mills. Given the experience to date and a reasonable estimate of completion costs we can now expect Mica power to cost a little over 3 mills

As any alternative power project would have experienced the inflation of costs during the past seven years, Mica's relative superiority has not deteriorated. In 1964 we asked where else on the continent could new power be obtained for 1.5 mills; today we can ask with equal justice where else

Black Power Rises in S. Africa As Apartheid Comes Full Circle

By STANLEY UYS

CAPE TOWN — Until very recently, the aim of most of South Africa's 15 million Africans, two million Coloreds (of mixed-race descent) and 600,000 Indians has been to work together with the white liberals, to share their company and their way of life, and to build a multi-racial society together with them. Now they have gone sour on this aim, and are telling the whites: "Leave us alone—we'll manage by ourselves."

This is apartheid's payoff. The racial wheel has turned full circle.

In this situation, there is nothing paradoxical about the fact that the most important Black Power manifestation in South Africa to date has come from the newly-formed South African Students' Organization, which has broken has broken away from the liberal National Union of South African Students (NUSAS), itself a body which is under constant government attack and security police surveil-lance and harassment.

Clive Nettleton, a former NUSAS vice-president, has explained: "NUSAS was founded on white initiative, is financed by white money, and reflects the opinions of the majority of its members, who are white. The policies and practices of NUSAS are not acceptable to many black

And yet the leaders of NUSAS go as far as their

And yet the leaders of NUSAS go as far as their rank-and-file supporters will allow them to go in engaging in a common struggle with black students. It is the race situation that defeats them.

Another white liberal organization that has experienced a black power breakaway is the University Christian Movement (UCM), a multi-racial, ecumenical body, which is also regularly under attack from the government, and even from the orthodox churches themselves.

'White Superiority Complex'

In a recent report, referring to a "confrontation between black and white members" that took place at a conference, it said: "At this conference, for the first time, the University Christian Movement was described as dampening the militancy of blacks in South Africa and denying them the chance of nurturing their black consciousness.

"This white superiority complex has rubbed off on virtually every white South African. It has also succeeded in giving blacks an inferiority complex. These superior and inferior attitudes have become apparent in even the most liberal multi-racial organizations. These have been essentially white-styled, white-run and white leadership organizations. organizations. This accusation can even be made to stick

Even in the church, the glimmerings of Black Power are discernible. One manifestation is the growing number of black separatist churches, now believed to number about 3,000 in South Africa

Possibly even more significant than these manifestations of Black Power—because, after all, once the Black Power organizations embark on militant action they will run into the full might of Mr. Vorster's well-equipped state—are the manifestations of Black Power within government-created, apartheid institutions.

Under the apartheid structure, each race group is given its own political institution, subordinate to white authority, but endowed with the promise of ultimate-sovereignty. Black Power strategists want these institutions to take everything the Vorster government gives them, and then to ask for more and more and more.

In these and other various ways, Black Power is slowly taking shape in South Africa. Probably one of its most fertile seed-beds is to be found in the separate cytribal" unisgratities which the government created for the African, Colored and Indian people. In these ethnic or "bush" colleges, black nationalism has been taking on its new form

End of Multi-Racialism Ideal

There is also an attempt to turn the word "black Into-a symbol of black consciousness. The Africans use it, of course, to describe themselves, but Colored politicians, intellectuals and others, who until now have preferred to associate themselves with the whites rather than with the Africans, are tending to accept it as well as their group

Some white liberals see in this new Black Power movement the end of the ideal of multi-racialism in South Africa. They see it as a sign that the race against time has been lost."

The Black Power movement, which started to manifest itself last year, has now found two highly articulate exponents—Barney Pityana, president of the all-black South African Students' Organization, and Steve Biko, the organization's former president.

White South Africans sat up and took startled interest when these two young African students explained their, philosophy at a seminar organized by the Abe, Bailey Institute of Inter-Racial Studies at the University of Cape Town.

Speaking on "power and social change in South Africa," Pityana emphasized the importance of black group consciousness as a prerequisite for changing the status quo in South Africa. "This is the reality of the South African situation," he said. "The black person must realize that he is on his own. This is the realism of black order that a group of people can bring about change there must be an identity of interests. . I submit that any identical interest between black and white is effectively blurred by the color question. The black people . . must be deeply rooted in their own being and see themselves as a functional monolithic structure.

"This means that black people must build themselves to a position of non-dependence on whites. They must work towards a self-sufficient political, social and economic unit... the confidence thus generated will give them a sense of pride and self-awareness... the way to

Biko, speaking on "white racism and black onsciousness." dismissed all white political parties, ressure groups, the National Union of South African tudents, and the "liberal Establishment" as vehicles for

"The limitations that have accompanied the involvement of liberals in the black man's struggle have been mostly responsible for the arrest of progress." he been mostly responsible for the arrest of progress, are said. "Because of their inferiority complex, blacks have tended to listen seriously to what the liberals had to say. With their 'characteristic arrogance of 'assuming' a monopoly on intelligence and moral judgment,' these self-appointed trustees of black interests have gone on to set the pattern and pace for the realization of the black man's aspirations.

"Over the years we have attained moral superiority over the white man. We shall watch as time destroys his paper castles and know that all these little pranks were but the frantic attempts of frightened little people to

The Black Power movement in South Africa, though, is still very much in its infancy; it differs from the Black Power movement in, say, file United States in two important respects. First, it has not reached the stage of militant action yet. All that is happening so far is that, in various fields, and in limited ways, blacks are beginning to cluster together to mobilize their blackness. They are only at the embryonic organization stage as yet.

White Liberals Are Dismayed

Second—and this is highly significant—they are in a sense calling apartheid's bluff. By withdrawing into their blackness, they are taking apartheid at its word, because this is what it tells them to do. Apartheid, of course, does not expect them to use their blackness as a springboard for aspirations which it does not sanction, but this is exactly what they are going to do.

White liberals, while they can understand and even approve the rifethods of Black Power, naturally are dismayed by the turn of events. Their ideal of whites and blacks moving forward together towards a common multiracial destiny does not look like being fulfilled now.

Biko, in fact, has warned that the future might not hold out the hopes the liberals have for it. "So blatantly explodutive in terms of the mind and the body is the practice of white racism that one wonders if the interests of blacks and whites have not become so multually exclusive as to exclude the possibility of there being room for all of us at the rendezvous of victory," he said.

This is the omnous change that is coming over South Africa.

THE WINNER OF THE TREACHEROUS EAST AFRICAN RALLY - DATSUN

imagine an off-road race—like the yearly madness at Baja—only three times as long! That's the African Salari. Spiked with flash, floods for 3,200 miles. Strictly for masochists, men and machines. Porsche, was there. Triumph, Peugeot, Alfa-Romeo, Volvo, Saab. . all the Continental heroes. And a herd of Datsun 1600s leading the pack. In the end, at Kampala, Uganda, just 19 of 97 starters crossed—the line. Seven of them were Datsunc. All standard sedans. Except for special raily suspensions lights, three, etc., very much like those you'll find at over 1,000 Datsun dealers across Canada and the U.S. The independent 4-whyel suspension soaked up the pounding. Front disc brakes shook off water and grime and kept downhill slatoms under control. Sturdy transmissions remained alive and well through torrid days and thousands of power-shifts. The standard overhead-cam engines proved they revved high, ran long and strong. You may never have the nerve to run in this raily. But you'll drive easy in your Datsun knowing it did.... and won.

The trip is timely. Fogg's fictional trip took place 100 years ago come Oct. 2. 1972. Perelman's projected book will appear ahead of that date.

Verne made Fogg the ulti-mate send-up of the unflappa-ble Englishman, a deadpan who toured 25,000 miles in one expression. On the other hand, Perelman chuckles and twin-

WILL HAVE COMPANION

Perelman is taking some pleasant liberties with the Verne travelogue. Instead of a male valet he is taking along his secretary Dianne Baker which strikes him as an immense improvement.

The route is being kept as authentic as possible, given a 100-year passage of time. Per-elman has lined up an ele-phant for the required 50 miles in India and hopes to "rescue" some as-yet-uniden-tified damsel from suttee, the old custom of burning widows along with the bodies of their late spouses.

There are many logistical problems: "I can't arrange for 55,000 pounds to be stolen from the Bank of England; and Scotland Yard would take dim view of sending a detec-tive named Fix chasing after me," Perelman twinkled.

Furthermore, Miss Baker frowns on smoking herself into a 24-hour stupor in a

Away back when her family lived in Madoc, Ontario, and she was only a few months old, her mother came west to San Juan Island to visit an aunt and uncle named Mackenzie. She brought baby Jean with her.

They travelled by the first train to bring passengers straight through (without change) from Ontario to Port Moody, then terminus of the trans-Canada railway.

The visit to San Juan rela tives (early residents on that controversial island who re-mained there after the boundary dispute was settled) was repeated many times after the Roberts family moved to Victoria in 1889. And the little girl Jean learned, first hand, of the boundary troubles.

Families placed on San Juan to run sheep and cattle farms for the Hudson's Bay Company and who remained on their land after the houndary was defined, blamed "the terrible Kaiser Wilhelm" who was final arbitrator in the dispute, for selling them down the river. selling them down the river

It wasn't until she was a grown woman, Miss Roberts told me that she learned the Kaiser was not really to

"All he had to go on was a map drawn at the time Capt. Vancouver and the Spaniards Galiano and Valdez were exploring the waterways. There was no other map available. It showed Canal du Haro as the only passage between the Islands. Rosario Strait was not even mentioned."

Next year is the 100th anniversary of the finalizing of the boundary dispute on October 10, 1872. It is certain to be marked by a special program of events, Miss. Roberts says. And she intends, all being well, to visit San Juan-then and to wear a pioneer-gown that belonged to pioneer gown that belonged to her mother in those days when the Roberts family visited the Mackenzies.

Turning from the boundary dispute to her two absorbing hobbies I discovered that stamps and snuff bottles are pretty well on an even footing as far as Jean Roberts' interest is concerned.

TV Station Compensation On The Way?

Times News Services

Survival of the Canadian broadcasting system is at stake in current discussion on cable television policy, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission said in Ottawa on the weekend.

The commission suggested that television stations may have to be bolstered by such measures as compensation by cable operators and their subscribers for loss of viewers to imported Ameri-can channels.

Contacted today Les Curran, president of Victoria Cablevision Ltd., is against cable television subsidies for the established broadcasters. HEALTHY'

"Broadcasting has been around for years," Curran told the Times, today, "Why should we all of a sudden have to start supporting-them?"

Curran suggested the Vic-toria CBC outlet was healthy and not in need of aid, financial or otherwise. But he said h.i.s company would "study carefully" the CRTC recommendations, and "try to live and work with them."

The subsidy proposal was one of a number of alternative ideas suggested by the CRTC in a 30-page report entitled The Integration of Cable Television in the Canadian Broadcastine System dian Broadcasting System.

The commission will hear submissions on these proposals at public hearings in April.

A Time of Crisis Or New-Found Joy

_By Jack Scott___

The whole premise of the National Centre for the Exploration of Human Potential, of La Jolla, California, is that we seldom realize more than 10 per cent of our capacity for the accomplishments and joys of living.

That's a chilling enough thought, on a blue Monday morning, for a man or woman of any vintage. For those who have reached retirement at 65 it may amount to a death sentence and that could ruin your whole day.

"No question about it," says Dr. Herbert A. Otto, the visiting chairman of that institute. "Retirement is a crisis period in the life of almost every man and woman. All of our studies show us that there are tremendous numbers of old people who are vegetating, living from meal to meal in a low-grade, low-level. stultifying, sterile existence. Vast numbers of them are glued to the boob-tube of television, sucking on the glass teat, as it's been described. It is an unconscious preparation for death, progressive detachment from life.

"The real tragedy of it is that it need not happen. The enjoyment of life has gone out of these people almost entirely because of their habit-ridden, habit-laden hackground. Reey've not developed an openness to new experience and genuine enjoyment. Retirement comes as an injury to their ego, their self-image Productivity has been the anchor of their self-esteem. When it ends there's a feeling that life has contracted instead of expanded into the lovous period ir ought.

acted instead of expanded into the joyous period ir ought

He is a man who knows what he's talking about. A youthful, theatrically handsome 48. Otto is a long-time clinical psychologist who has worked extensively with older men and women and is completely convinced that life can begin, if these not already begun, at 65.

"All of our earlier years should be in the nature of a preparation for retirement, but it is never too late," he says. "We've had our greatest success in groups where the retired have joined in with young and middle-aged to share their experiences in a deeply inter-personal, supportive, and caring way. That's the way to become infected with enthusiasm, to develop fresh new attitudes to living.

* * *

"With older people alone you must have more patience and go more slowly," but we've had success there, too. One essential—half the battle, really—is that they must be people who want to learn, who want to light the spark of the years that are left to them. You begin with the proposition that they're entering upon one of the most enjoyable, harvesting periods of life. We know from our studies that every human being has capacities, abilities and intentialities that he hasn't realized. Now, to the older man or woman, we can fell them truthfully that they've the time and the energy to actualize those possibilities we know are there."

It is a search or a discovery that may demand a change

It is a search or a discovery that may demand a change not merely in personality, but in believing.

"The personality of a human being is never static, but always in a process of evolution," says Otto. "It is formed primarily by our relationships with others and it is a growing thing. The same can be said of what's been called our beinef structure. It has a tremendous amount to do with what happens to us. If you can believe positively that life is an on-going adventure which has no end, in which death is only a part of it, then it can be a fantastic journey ahead.

part of it, then it can be a fantastic journey ahead.

The concept of pleasure is equally debilitated. There a not nearly enough true, ambendic pleasure or joy. Instead, within our habit system, we experience only attenuated or pseudo-pleasure. We know this from our studies of middle-aged, middle-class people who have it made financially. We asked them, When was the last time you had an absolutely wonderful time, when your heart was dancing inside you? Invariably, the answer was: Years ago. This pseudo-pleasure is even more pronounced in older people, as you would expect. "There was once a time when we suppressed any kind of freedom of expression or whatever you may call it. But now we want the girls to dress well, show emotion and develop personalities. It is important in sports especially to have an identity and we're certainly out to achieve that."

Kathy Whitworth, at 31; has had little trouble in achieving an identity. A native of Jal. N.M., who now makes her home in Texas, the 5-foot-9, 140-pound Miss Whitworth had won a total of $299,209 going into the 1971 season. She has won 55 tour victories since turning pro in 1959.

It may be a while yet before the ladies achieve all of their goals. But with leaders like Kathy Whitworth showing the way, the young collegians joining the tour-may soon be discovering that with or without Women's Lib. "separate but equal" rights can also be profitable.

Trees, Shrubs Survive Neglect

By HILDA BEASTALL

Reasoning in favor of planting trees and shrubs is frequently the theme of this column, for my feeling is that they create a backbone of interest in the general garden scheme. When all other arguments and reasoning fails, there is one further point to reasoning fails, there is one further point to bring forward—the survival ability of these more permanent plants.

Don't bring up the fact that a buildozer levels trees as quickly as it wipes out a vegetable garden. I have seen this too; but trees will survive neglect.

During their early years of life in a garden, young trees and shrubs need care. Farticularly is this so here on our shallow clay or gravelly soils. They require watering during our long dry' period and surface mulching to increase the depth of soil.

Provided with these "amenties" as the E.

Provided with these "amenities," as the English label the ordinary accessories to civilized living, these two kinds of plants are likely to become well established.

After five years or so of this basic care, the hardlest trees and shruhs are likely to survive neglect by the gardener, while a garden completely made up of annuals and berbatchus perennials will die out within the same period.

may, but since the majority of our flowering plants are hybrids some will be sterile, some will revert to species, though the rare one may do some hybridizing on its own and produce something of genuine interest for the future owner who recognizes its merit.

When a new owner takes over a neglected property containing two or three trees and several shrubs, there is every chance of reclamation, even after several years of · Often a valuable specimen is discovered; valuable because of its age, or for the size attained during years of following its own inclinations unhampered by human interference.

Knowledgeable shaping will bring such a permanent plant into its rightful place as a splendid feature of the property. U will have a hardy constitution, having weathered rms and drought; its roots will have gone searching widely for food, and deeply for water.

If you acquire property with old trees and strubs, treasure them, and learn about them.

If you have a new properly, put in your quota of permanent plants for posterity to discover. They will be the garden treasures of the future.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I read that at the Pritzger School of Medicine in Chicago, some of the doctors are using a system which they feel is going to help definitely in the detection of pre-cancerous and early concerous changes in body tissues. The method is based on studies of some of the chemicals in the blood. Early detection of cancer is one of the most important ways of saving the person's life. If a cancer can be detected early in its development, before it has grown and spread to other parts of the body or other organs (this spreading is called metastasis), the person has a good-chance of recovering.

It is to be hoped that the new method continues to work well, and that it can be so simplified that it can be used by doctors throughout the world. Also, a release just came saying that at the Hadassah Medical School in Israel a physician has found another method of quickly and easily diagnosing an early cancer. This is appendix will burst and the contents invade the abdominal cavity to produce a possible fatal peritonitis (inflammation of the peritoneum, the inner lining of the abdominal cavity). The risk of death increases rapidly with a delay in seeking treatment. A study of the records of patients with acute appendicitis admitted to several hospitals from 1956 to 1960 showed that in 28 per cent of the eases, perforation had already occurred, and in this group of 329 patients there were 18 deaths. In 837 cases in which there was no perforation there was only one death. Once I asked an able child specialist how to tell that a child

As we all know, the danger of acute appendicitis is that the

Once I asked an able child specialist how to tell that a child has acute appendicitis, and not a stomache-ache-due to eating green apples. He said, "The child with acute appendicitis keeps his mother up all night," and that is so true. When a child starts crying with abdominal pain at 10 p.m. and it does not ease up he had better be gotten to the hospital by 5 a.m., and if the doctor there thinks wise, operated on.

All patients should know that the worst thing to do to a child with a suspicion of acute appendicitis is to give a laxative. Such treatment has killed many a child.

U.S. Snoop Power: 53 Spies in Crowd of

By MICHAEL GETTLER The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A classic case of military intelligence overkill—in which 119 demonstrators outside a gate at Ft Carson, Colo., included 53 undercover agents from all services plus a sprinkling of newsmen—unfolded Thursday before Senator Sam J. Ervin's sub-committee on constitutional rights. tional rights.

Above the crowd, the committee was told by former agent Laurence F. Lane, now a legislative aide to Rep. Robert H. Giaino (D—Conn.), at least six helicopters hovered to watch and take pictures.

But the choppers made so much noise that the agents on the ground couldn't tape record the speeches the anti-war agitators were making.

Lane, who served for a year and a half in the G2 (intelligence) section of the 5th infantry division at Ft. Carson, told the committee that the incident outside the gate said a lot about how military spying got out of hand.

Rather than any "planned national military conspiracy," Lane said, it was the action of individual comman ers that pushed the military well beyond its authorized intelligence gathering role.

Rivalry among neighboring commanders, mistrust of information developed by other sources, spies from one unit trailing those of another, the personal view of each commander about snooping on civilians, and the constant demand for quantify rather than quality all played a part, he

Intelligence gathered by agents, whether reliable or not, Lane said, was forwarded to army intelligence headquarters at Ft. Holabird, Md., where it went into the computers and then out again to other commands "as substantiated facts."

The information could be damaging not only to those spied upon, he said, but to any army troops that eventually had to rely on it.

Lane said one dossier sent from Holabird to Ft. Carson on comedian and civil rights activist Dick Gregory "was so tainted it was unusable. I was amazed . . . it was completely subjective, based on unsubstantiated information and unreliable sources with no attempt to be objective."

Another ex-Ft. Carson agent, Oliver A. Pierce, told of being ordered to infiltrate a Young Adult Project sponsored by the Pike's Peak Council of Churches to see if its leader was influencing local GIs. After six months, Pierce said, he reported no influence, but was kept on the job.

Ervin also revealed other instances of infiltration of church groups in a number of letters he said have come from other agents and individuals since he announced his hearings.

One report said the navy had the Episcopal bishop of California under surveillance for his anti-war activities. Another indicated that the navy was still involved in domestic surveillance as late as December 1970, well beyond a Pentagon-ordered cut-off.

Ervin also said he received information that the navy's investigative arm had listed the institute for policy studies, a Washington think-tank as suspicious because they had "known leftists working for them" and were co-operating with "known leftist black groups."

A state legislator from Texas, Curtis M. Graves, testified of being told by a former investigator that the army had been watching him ever since he took part in desegregation ait-ins in Houston in 1960.

Pentagon officials are to appear before Ervin's mmittee next Tuesday.

Senator Birth Bayh (D -- Ind.) introduced legislation Senator Birth Bayn (D - Ind.) introduced registation Thursday requiring any government agency maintaining records on individuals to notify them that the records exist and to permit their inspection. A similar bill has been introduced in the house by Rep. Edward I. Koch (D - N.Y.).

MEET DR. OTTO

A Time of Crisis Or New-Found Joy

By Jack Scott.

The whole-premise of the National Centre for the Exploration of Human Potential, of La Jolla, California, is that we seldom realize more than 10 per cent of our capacity for the accomplishments and joys of living.

That's a chilling enough thought, on a blue Monday morning, for a man or woman of any vintage. For those who have reached retirement at 65 it may amount to a death sentence and that could ruin your whole day.

"No question about it," says Dr. Herbert A. Otto, the visiting chairman of that institute, "Retirement is a crisis period in the life of almost every man and woman. All of our les show us that there are tremendous numbers of old people who are vegetating, living from meal to meal in a low-grade, low-level, stultifying, sterile existence. Vast numbees of them are gladed to the boob-tube of television, sucking on the glass teat, as it's been described. It is an unconscious preparation for death, though they shove the idea of death away from themselves. It becomes a progressive detachment from life.

"The real tragedy of it is that it need not happen. The enjoyment of his has gone out of these people almost entirely because of their habit-ridden, habit-laden background. They've not developed an openness to new experience and genuine enjoyment. Retirement self-image. Productivity has been the anchor of their self-esteem. When it ends there's a feeling that life has contracted instead of expanded into the joyous period it ought to be."

He is a man who knows what he's talking about A youthful, theatrically handsome 48. Otto is a long-time clinical psychologist who has worked extensively with older men and women and is completely convinced that life can begin, it it has not already begun, at 65.

"All of our earlier years should be in the nature of a preparation for retirement, but it is never too late," he says

"We've had our greatest success in groups where the retired have joined in with young and middle-aged to share their experiences in a deeply inter-personal, supportive and caring way. That's the way to become infected with enthusiasm, to develop fresh new attitudes to living.

"With older people alone you must have more patience and go more slowly, but we've had success there, too. One essential—half the battle, really—is that they must be people who want to learn, who want to light the spark of the years that are left to them. You begin with the proposition that they're entering upon one of the most enjoyable, harvesting periods of life. We know from our studies that every human being has capacities, abilities and potentialities that he hasn't realized. Now, to the older man or woman, we can tell them truthfully that they've the time and the energy to actualize those possibilities we know are there."

It is a search or a discovery that may demand a change

It is a search or a discovery that may demand a change t merely in personality, but in believing.

"The personality of a human being is never static, but always in a process of evolution," says Otto. "It is formed primarily by our relationships with others and it is a growing thing. The same can be said of what's been called our belief structure. It has a tremendous amount to do with what happens to us. If you can believe positively that life is an ongoing adventure which has no end, in which death is only a part of it, then it can be a suitaget of surroy wheel.

going adventure which has no end, in which death is only a part of it, then it can be a farfastic journey shead.

"The concept of pleasure is equally debilitated. There's not nearly enough true, authentic pleasure or joy. Instead, within our habit system, we experience only attenuated or pseudo-pleasure. We know this from our studies of middle-aged, middle-class people who have it made financially. We asked them, 'When was the last time you had an absolutely wonderful time, when your heart was dancing inside you?' Invariably, the answer was: 'Years ago.' This pseudo-pleasure is even more pronounced in older people, as you would expect. The ability to see the world through new eyes, the ability of the child who cries out, 'Gee, look at that beautiful flower!' is all too easily lost.''

But without that sort of natural exuberance, that zest for life, can there be a manufactured substitute?

It was a question that Otto had no need to ponder

"The quality that's missing is a curiosity and an experimental attitude toward life, an adventuresomeness, if you like," he said, "and it can be re-awakened: I've seen it happen over and over again, even with people you could describe as the living dead. It is a rediscovery of spontaneityand freedom, of acting on the spur of the moment rather than planning everything in advance or living a structured existence in which one routine leads to another routine.

"One of the most rewarding aspects of our work is to s be different person who has rediscovered that ability to be carefree, to exhibit over everything that they see and experience. It is a child-like thing, but never childish. It need not involve a loss of dignity and it need not be eccentricity. Instead, it is a revitalizing of the capacity of curiosity, of

Otto would give to a typical oldster in this retirement capital

"I would like most to speak to the man over 65 who, in

"I would like to tell him that the most productive, iting and adventurous years of his life may be ahead if he'll.fight off the temptation to estrange himself from the human race. I would tell him, 'If you choose to sit there and spend your life in a tamiliar habit pattern we can almost predict that your span's going to be shortened, but you have tremendous possibilities hidden inside you for a vital life.

The largest single increase requested is for acquisition of books, periodicals, films and ther materials from $64,500 ast year to $190,000 in 1971. Due to large staff reorga-nization during 1970, salaries and wages requested are less than last year's total. The total requested is $418,513, compared to 1970's $419,733.

Wages will account for 51 per cent of the total budget this year, compared with 62 per cent in 1970.

School Staffs Vote No

Janitors, tradesmen and groundsmen employed by the Greater Victoria school board voted 94 per cent Sunday to reject an offer of a 7.9 per cent wage in-

At another meeting the same evening Saanich civic employees voted to accept an almost identical offer.

The main obstacle to a settlement between the school board and its amployees who board and its employees, who are members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, is the question of Saturday

The board wants to keep many schools open on Saturdays— which means having janitors on the premises— but doesn't want to pay them double time.

The board is proposing the janitors' work week should be any five days in six, except Sunday, and has offered to pay the janitors eight hours' wages for seven hours' work. However, the union is asking for eight hours' pay for six hours' work, and double time after 6 p.m. Saturday.

'BACK 38 YEARS'

'BACK SO YEARS'

"The Tuesday to Saturday work week is a very contentious issue," said local president Alex Macdonald. "It's putting us back 30 years."

He said the union had fought hard to get Saturday off.

The union is also opposed to the two-year offer, because it means a smaller increase in 1972, Macdonaid said.

"If we accept a two-year contract it would put us behind everybody else."

The school board says its fantions are among the bigh.

The school board says its janitors are among the high-est paid in the capital region, and cites lower wages of janitors employed by other school boards, federal and provincial governments and private companies.

The union, on the other hand, says the board can afford to pay as much as certain up-island boards such as Ladysmith, where janitors get $3.18 an hour, compared with a basic rate of $3.11 here.

The board's latest offer had it been accepted, would have given janitors a new wage of $584 for 1971 and $627

Finnigan said the branch usually finds ducks dead after storms in the area, amounting to "a significantly high storm toll."

The breakwater would provide shelter for birds in the course of protecting moored boats in stormy winter weather, he said.

The club originally proposed a piling breakwater 600 feet long, rising to an average height of 11 feet above the water's surface. In the face of concerted opposition by resi-dents of the area, the wooden breakwater was scrapped in favor of a rubble-mound type which would be lower and

The proposal will be sub-mitted to the department of transport, which then will ask Gak Bay council for its recommendation. If approved, the breakwater would be built this year.

ANOTHER SHIP SPEWING OIL

CAPE : TOWN (Reuter) helicopters poured solvent today on an oil slick more than five miles long spread by the striken tanker Wafra, trapped on a sandbank off the tip of Officials are afraid the 28,339-ton Liberian flag ship, which so far has only spilled oil from its ikers, may break up and spew its cargo 40,000 tons of crude oil into the ocean and on to magnificent beaches nearby.

Eighteen crew members were taken off by a Russian tanker Saturday and two of the seamen left aboard tried to swim to safety Sunday. One died after being rescued and the other is missing.

Tankers-What Can Canada Do? Nothing!

VANCOUVER (CP) - Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said here it would be difficult for Canada to do anything that would lead to halting United States plans to ship Alaskan oil in super-tankers down the west coast of British Columbia.

"This appears to be totally beyond our reach as a nation," Mr. Davis told a Liberal party seminar in-West Vancouver.

He said that if the U.S. decides to move crude oil by an 810-mile pipeline south from the North Slope to the Pacific port of Valdez and their ship it by tanker to a refinery just south of the Canadian border at Ferndale, Wash., only international waters and @S. territory and waters would be involved.

Canada is opposed to the proposal, now under study by the U.S. governments, to ship the oil by tanker. Ottawa has expressed fears that accidental spills could seriously endanger Canadian waters.

"I just don't have the easy answer," Mr. Davis said. "We have been in close contact with Washing ton. But we don't seem to have b able to bring much influence to bear on this."

Meanwhile, in Anchorage today Interior department hearings into the Alaska pipeline went into an unscheduled fifth day.

Union Vows Fight At Ballot Box

The general trucking industry in British Columbia rolled back into full gear this morning after Teamster Union members voted Sunday to obey a cabinet back-to-work order

This ended the 10-day work stoppage which involved both strikes and lockouts and affected up to 3,400 union members and 70 companies.

But while Teamsters were back at work, they approved resolutions to: Shut down any employer who requires union members to handle struck goods; Defeat those members of the legislature who voted in favor of a back-to-work resolution

Ed Zimmerman, secretary of Teamsters Local 31, said the union will "fight to the Supreme Court of Canada" any employer who asks a union member to drive equipment carrying struck goods or takes disciplinary action against a union member for refusing to do this.

Another part of the resolution-approved at a meeting of 1,800 union members in Vancouver said "That we remember those individuals who imposed this legislation and defeat them at the ballot box.'

Zimmerman said this is a move away from the traditional non-partisanship of the Teamsters Union in political action, but added that "we do not endorse any political party.

The back-to-work resolution was supported by 33 Social Credit MLAs and four Liberals. It was opposed by 12 New Democrats and one Liberal.

Zimmerman said union members will be told who voted each way "and I imagine it will be by name and party."

The cabinet order, which has no time limit, ending the work stoppage also referred the dispute to the mediation commission for a compulsory settlement. Both sides, however, can reach their own agreement but there was no word today of negotiations.

Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the Teamsters Union, explained after Sunday's membership meeting that the recommendation approved by members was reached after discussions with the B.C. Federation of Labor.

It was felt that Premier Bennett would call an election if the return to work order was defied, he

"The issue of collective bargaining which we have raised would have been lost in a variety of other emotional issues raised by the premier." he

"It is our belief that the government would have won this election and been in a position to bring down even more repressive legislation."
